

#RealNewForest

How do commoners know which animals are theirs?

Commoners know their animals and can usually recognise them without difficulty. Each pony is branded with the owner's brand and each cow or sheep carries identification tags in its ears. Donkeys have a brand or an ear button. The local agister is familiar with the animals in their area and can often identify most of them individually, too.

©realnewforest2019